Kseniya Lutskina, a journalist from Belarus, was arrested in 2020 following protests against the controversial presidential elections and sentenced to 8 years in prison for helping establish independent media. In 2024, she was pardoned due to health issues and placed under house arrest in Minsk. Later, under a humanitarian visa, she emigrated to Berlin, where she continues to fight for the over 1,000 people in Belarus, imprisoned due to politically motivated charges.

In the discussion, she will talk about her experiences of imprisonment and life after release. You are welcome to ask your questions and learn more about the human rights situation in Belarus.

We invite you to join the event and exchange ideas with Kseniya!

The event will be held in English. You are welcome to ask questions in German, and the moderator will translate.
